

Abstract Title	7 Things that Agile Leaders and Executives do Differently in Today's New Ways of Working
Presentation Type	Oral Presentation
Full Name	Dipesh Pala
Job Title	Agile Capability Leader – Asia-Pacific
Organisation	IBM

Introduction

Most of the world's largest organisations are attempting an enterprise Agility transformation but not all are succeeding. One recent study shows that 75% of all Agile transformations fail. This makes us wonder if the Agile values and principles from the 20-year-old Agile Manifesto is still conducive to today's new ways of working?

We need to recognise that while new technologies bring some consolation for overcoming the challenges of new ways of working, the real secret to success is hidden in the mindset and cultural shift. Leaders who focus on providing psychological safety in a modern workforce culture are helping their employees be the best versions of themselves, both physically and mentally.

Abstract

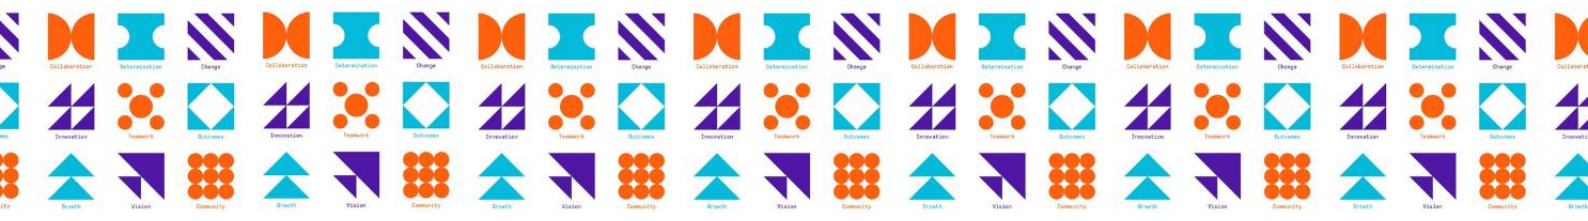

Drawing upon more than a decade of Agile transformation experiences in multiple organisations across nine countries, Dipesh will share real-life case studies and insights to provide clear guidelines, organised around seven key areas that will be useful for leaders and organisations wanting to unleash the full potential of their Agile teams. Be inspired by knowing what serves to catalyse and nourish a modern workforce culture – and what does the opposite.

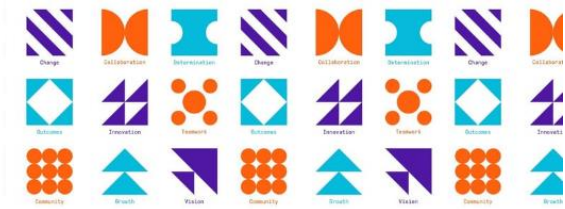

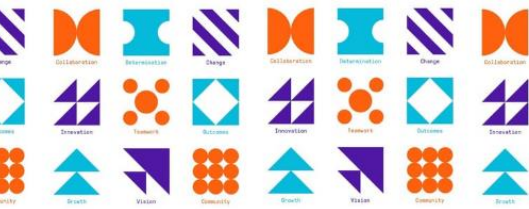

Speaker Profile(s)

Over the last decade, Dipesh has coached over 3000 Agile practitioners and has been instrumental in rolling out Agile at scale in many organisations across multiple countries including Australia, NZ, UK, India, Thailand, Malaysia, Singapore, Korea, Philippines, Indonesia & China.

In addition to being a top-rated speaker at industry conferences, Dipesh is also a seasoned facilitator who is able to drive out the best outcomes from any project-based or strategy workshops.

A keen advocate of simplicity, Dipesh offers simple, practical yet powerful ways to address the challenges Agile leaders and teams face today. Dipesh continuously pushes leaders and organisations beyond the principles and practices to take a step further into their Agile journey.
