Introduction

Abstract

As increasing number of organisations adopt ‘agile organisation design’ and ‘spotify models’, the role of a project manager is disappearing. What IS the role of a project manager in the agile world? How do we stay relevant as professionals and what can we do to ‘stay ahead’ of the curve?

Speaker Profile(s)

Peter has helped some of Australia’s largest corporations and government departments realise benefits from adopting digital, agile & ‘new ways of working’ as an Enterprise Agile Coach, program manager and as a people leader / Head of Projects.

Peter brings a range of expertise from scaling agile programs from 150 people to over 1500, through to renovating and building data centres, as well as corporate restructures.

This commitment and track record was recognised by being appointed the Oceania representative for Agile20Reflect festival - celebrating the 20th birthday of the Agile Manifesto.

Currently Peter is working as the Centre of Expertise Lead for Ways of Working and Delivery at Telstra. He is guiding and supporting the implementation of agile @ scale which encompasses over 18 000 individuals and 1000 teams.
